The Knotty Pine.

Mrs. D. E. Hyder, of Blue Ridge, called to see us last week and gave us an item for publication that will be of interest to the older citizens of the county, if not to all.

There stood in Blue Ridge township a tree, which was known as the knotty pine, of huge dimensions and of unknown age. Around this pine there is a dense undergrowth. When deer were plentiful in this country this place was known as the knotty pine stand, and the name still clings to the spot. On Wednesday night of Jan. 24th, 1905, this knotty pine yielded to the ravages of the severe storm that raged at that time. The pine is gone, but the place will be known for many years to come as "knotty pine."

Mr. C. O. Brown, of Columbia, S. C., employed an experienced painter to paint his house. The painter on seeing the quantity sent to the house—Devoe—said there wasn't enough. There were ten gallons left, when the job was done. It's the common experience.

Temperance Talk.

Home influence may be estimated from the immense force of its impressions. It is the prerogative of home to make first impressions upon our nature and to give that nature its first direction onward and upward; it uncovers the moral fountain, chooses its channel and gives the stream its first impulse. It makes the first stamp and sets the seal upon the plastic nature of the child; it gives the first tone to our desires and furnishes ingredients that will either sweeten or embitter the whole cup of life, to erase them we must remove all the sprats of our being. Even the infidel lives under the holy influence of a pious mother's impressions; it preserves him from the clutches of avowed infidelity. The home influence is either a curse or a blessing either for good or for evil, it can not be neutral. The specific influences of husband and wife; of parent and child of brother and sister united and harmoniously blended, constitute the home influence. It is great, silent irresistible and permanent. Like the calm deep stream it moves on in silent but overwhelming power, it strikes its roots deep into the human heart and spreads its branches wide over our whole being. Like the lily that braves the tempest and the alpine flower that leans its cheek on the bosom of eternal snows, it is exerted amid the wildest storms of life, and breathes a softening spell in our bosom even when a heartless world is freezing up the fountains of sympathy and love. It holds the empire of the heart, and rules the life, it restrains the wayward passions of the child, and checks him in his mad career of life. Our habits, too, are formed under the moulding power of homes. Who does not feel this influence of home upon all his habits of life? "The most illustrious statesman, the most distinguished warriors," the most eloquent ministers and the greatest benefactors of human kind owe their greatness to the fostering influences of home." To love home with a deep and abiding interest with a view to its everlasting, elevating influence, is to love truth and heaven. No one can so inspire a man to a noble purpose, as a noble woman; all that was worth admiration in the character of Henry VI, was reflections of the heroics of his wife Margaret. William Prince of Orange, was restored to the right path by the grand qualities of his wife Mary. Justinian, the Roman Emperor confesses that his wise laws were the suggestion of his wife. Theodora, Andrew Jackson the warrior, and President, had his mightiest reinforcement in his plain wife, whose inartistic attire was the amusement of the elegant circles in which she was invited. Washington who broke the chain that held America in foreign vassalage, wore for forty years a chain around his own neck, that chain holding the miniature likeness of her who had been his greatest inspiration, whether among the snows at Valley Forge or the honors of the Presidential chair. Pliny's pen was driven through all its poetic and historical dominions by his wife, Calpurnia, who sang his stanzas to the sound of flute, and set among audiences enraptured at her husband's genius, herself the most enraptured. Pericles said he got all his eloquence and statesmanship from his wife. De Tocqueville whose writings will be potential and quoted while the world lasts, ascribes his success to his wife and says, "Of all the blessings, which God has given me, the greatest was Maria Motley." Martin Luther says of his wife: I would not exchange my poverty with her for all the riches of croesus without her. Isabella of Spain by her superior faith in Columbus, put into the hand of Ferdinand, her husband, America." A man is no better than his wife will let him be. O wives of America, swing your scepters of wifely influence for God and good homes. Woman always has voted and always will. Our Greatgrand fathers thought they were by their votes putting Washington into the presidential chair. No, His mother by the principles she taught him, and by the habits she inculcated, made him President. It was a Christian mother's hand dropping the ballot when Lord Bacon wrote, and Newton Philosophized, and Alfred the Great governed, and Jonathan Edwards thundered of judgement to come.

How many men there have been in high political station who would have been insufficient to stand the test to which moral principles was put, had it not been for a wife's voice that encouraged them to do right, and a wife's prayer that sounded louder than the clamor of partisanship. I come before women to day who have the eternal salvation of their husbands in their hand.

God has appointed woman to be the chief agent in bringing this world back to God. I may say the soul is immortal that we are lost and undone, without Christ, that there will be a judgement day after awhile. Yonder are some men who will refuse it. But a Christian woman in a Christian household, living in the faith and the Gospel—nobody can refute that. Home influence consecrated Christian home influences are the mightiest of all influences upon the soul. There are men today who have maintained their integrity not because they were any better naturally than some others, but because there were home influences praying for them all the time.

They are launched on the world with the benediction of a Christian mother, wife or sister.

Ladies of Hendersonville, with enchanting voice the new year calls us forward, will we greet it with brighter hope, greater faith, deeper consecration and the earnest determination to make it sweeter and better and more glorious than the years that have gone before.

The present is our own; to use it worthily, to the up-lifting of humanity and the glory of God, is the highest realization of life's true purpose. It is a beautiful enduring light, an ever urgent invitation to better things and higher realms, but we can climb up to those heights only by a patient and diligent performance of our duties of today. Perhaps many of you life myself voice these sentiments. Husbands, fathers, brothers, "Have you praise? Then defer not the giving; Have you breaths? Then place them on me now, for one rosebud is worth more to me living than a flower-strown grave to me dead."—Hustler

Cured of Backache.

Member of the Business Men's League and one of the best known business men in St. Louis, Mo. Read what Mr. Wand has to say about Dr. Fenner's Kidney and Backache Cure:

"I know what it is to be afflicted with backache and I sympathize with fellow sufferers. After swallowing various and frequent nauseating doses of this and that prescription I decided that if Dr. Fenner's Kidney and Backache Cure could not rid me of those backaches it at least would not do me any harm and I procured a bottle.

"Now the first bottle didn't stop those wearing backaches, but it did afford me great relief. The second bottle, however, did effectually put a stop to those racking backaches. Occasionally they returned when strenuous business affairs exhausted the physical forces, but a dose or two of Dr. Fenner's Cure gave instant relief.
